Questions for Writing and Discussion

Many online instructors are looking to the more out-of-date, less classroom-friendly cafe-like, and phone calls. They often a problem. "For the first time ever, a real classroom experience," says a professor who was a student of the famous "ideology" course. "Online courses allow students to take notes, and work on assignments when they want. However, the students are more engaged and motivated. They are more likely to participate in class discussions and complete assignments."

Mike is a 22-year-old student at San Francisco State University. He recently started taking online classes. When asked why he decided to try online classes, Mike said, "I wanted the flexibility to be able to work on my assignments whenever I had the time. Online classes also allow me to do the work at my own pace." Mike is one of thousands of students who are taking advantage of the new online learning opportunities. He finds the classes to be more engaging and interactive, and he enjoys the ability to participate in discussions without having to be physically present in the classroom.

Many instructors are finding that online classes are just as effective as traditional classroom settings. "I think the biggest benefit of online classes is that students can learn at their own pace," says another professor. "They can work on assignments whenever they have the time, and they can participate in class discussions without having to be physically present in the classroom."
